THE LETTER TO THE DEAD.

We remember at the Wilderness a gallant Mississippian had fallen, and at night, just before 7 and 8 burying him, there came a letter from her he loved best. One of the group around his bodya minister -- whose tenderness was almost womanly, broke the silent tearfulness with which he saw | the law, was arrested by a military order, 12 and 13 the dead-letter; he took it and laid it upon the and was conveyed to Charleston, S. He will see it when he wakes." It on charges preferred by one W. Johnson,

Comes the letter from a mother? Are a sister's longings there? Or the fondness of another, Loved and loving, young and fair Seek not now to know the writer, Seek not whence or why it came : As he died, his dimmed eye saw her ; As he died, he breathed her name. It has come o'er hills and valleys, Crossed o'er rivers, passed o'er lakes; "Bury it upon his bosom, He will see it when he wakes." Bury the dead with the letter unread,

There to remain, Till the soldier awakes from his slumber, To join in the battle again. Ah! but never more to battle He will march by beat of drum Nevermore when the fight is over Sigh for gentle peace to come; Nevermore to roll-call answer;

Nevermore will pace his round

She who lingered as she wrote it O'er each tender word she penned, She perchance will find her sorrow With some later lover end. But for him those words of loving May survive when time is o'er, And though she forget her fondness. Greet him on the further shore.
